NURSING TIMES

Underweight children need this help

AS A NURSE you will be aware that during the days of rapid growth and development the need for extra vitamins is considerable. 'Vimaltol', a nutritious vitamin food concentrate, reinforces the daily intake of the essential Vitamins A, D and important Vitamin B factors, which with other nutritive elements help to maintain bodily weight, strength and vitality at normal levels.

'Vimaltol' contains malt extract, yeast, halibut liver oil, iron and added vitamins presented in a delicious and easily assimilable form which children take readily.

Furthermore, it renders the calcium content of milk more readily available. This, of course, has an important bearing on the proper formation of sound bones and teeth. 'Vimaltol' can be confidently recommended as a valuable aid to the development of healthy childhood.

The fruit that finishes the job you began

The dedicated nurse, the nurse with a vocation, knows no more humbling yet heart-lifting moment than when her patient passes the crisis of a serious illness; or when the will to live triumphs over the hazards of a major operation; or when she puts a new-born baby into its mother's arms.

It is then that a nurse knows the reward for all the hours of vigilance, the days and nights of exhausting routine and sheer hard work that go into her job.

When your patient is getting better

But a nurse's job doesn't end there. As the doctor's invaluable aide-de-camp, she must go on after the drama has passed, leading the patient gently back to health.

She knows that this is the time when vitamin C is essential, because it helps to build red blood cells and aids the quick healing of wounds, both internal and external. It fights the fatigue and lassitude that follows illness—and, even more important, it builds up the body's resistance and goes a long way towards preventing recurrence of ill-health.

Ribena every day—to keep fit

As the nurse knows, the body is unable to store vitamin C, as it does other vitamins; and so it becomes imperative that this vital component of health should be taken every day. This is why Ribena is the nurse's aide-de-camp. Ribena—made from blackcurrants, the fruit with the highest natural vitamin C content—is the most delicious tonic for convalescents, as well as for maintaining the health of your patients. It's not enough to nurse them back to fitness—make sure they stay fit by drinking Ribena every day.

It's not only a tonic—it's a treat!

Being entirely free from cellular material, Ribena does not upset the most delicate digestion—so even very small patients, from as early as the fourth week onwards, should have their vitamin C in the form of this delicious drink. During childhood generally, the vitamin C requirement of the growing organism is much higher, comparatively, than during adult life, so that the routine use of Ribena is obviously of great value. Children don't set up an automatic resistance to Ribena on the grounds that it's a medicine because "it's doing them good"—on the contrary, they love its fruit flavour, and think of it as a special treat. Children's nursing is made considerably easier with the help of Ribena.

You need it, too

Nurses too—because they are doing such an important job in the community, and one which necessarily makes immense demands upon their vitality—must remember that they themselves need daily vitamin C. Ribena is the answer—as essential a part of a nurse's equipment as her thermometer.

So remember to advise all your patients (the healthy ex-patients and the ones you are still tending) to keep a bottle of Ribena always in the house. Tell them to take it in milk, or in hot or cold water, to ensure that they have their all-important daily supply of vitamin C.

A NEW VOLUME IN THE NURSES' AIDS SERIES

'JUST WHAT WE HAVE NEEDED FOR YEARS'
writes a Sister Tutor

Aids to Arithmetic in Nursing

by William C. Fream, S.R.N.

Just what is needed because it begins at the beginning and assumes no previous knowledge. The basic, elementary arithmetic is taught in a style that makes it so clear and easy to remember that any student nurse working on her own with this book can bring her knowledge up to standard without difficulty. Once and for all, she can master fractions, decimals, percentages and the metric system, and learn to perform without hesitation the various calculations her duties require. This done, the student is taught to apply her knowledge to the special needs of nursing: to thermometry, to heat and calories, to the dilution of drugs and lotions, to pressure and its effects and to the reading and preparation of graphs. Exercises (with answers) are provided, and the whole text is illustrated with clear, illuminating drawings, diagrams and arithmetical examples.

Whitley Council (Staff Side) New Chairman

A NURSE has been elected chairman of the Staff Side of the Nurses and Midwives Functional Whitley Council for the National Health Service.

This is an important event and nurses will appreciate the honour as well as the onerous responsibility for Miss Frances G. Goodall, C.B.E., S.R.N., general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing, who has been secretary to the Staff Side of the Nurses and Midwives Whitley Council since its inception in 1948, and who was elected chairman at the September meeting of the Staff Side. Mrs. F. R. Mitchell, O.B.E., S.C.M., formerly secretary of the Royal College of Midwives, was re-elected vice-chairman and Miss M. E. Davies, LL.B., assistant secretary to the Staff Side, was elected secretary.

The election of these officers is an annual event but new nominations for the chairmanship were necessitated this year by the retirement of Mr. Colin Roberts, O.B.E., who has been chairman of the Staff Side throughout the life of this functional Whitley Council but who did not stand for re-nomination. Mr. Roberts had previously been chairman of the nurses panel of the Rushcliffe Committee, the first national negotiating committee for nurses' salaries and conditions of service, which was set up in 1941 as a result of the Athlone Report which had demonstrated so forcibly the extreme variations in nurses' conditions and rates of pay throughout England, Scotland and Wales. Recognizing his long record of constructive service for the progress of nurses and the nursing profession, the Council of the Royal College of Nursing invited Mr. Roberts to be an associate member of that Council, and his resignation in July was regretfully accepted with the warmest expressions of appreciation. His retirement from the Staff Side of the Nurses and Midwives Whitley Council was also the occasion of many tributes from representatives of the professional associations and trade unions present.

Readers may like to be reminded of the structure of the Nurses and Midwives Functional Whitley Council which is responsible for negotiating the salaries and conditions of service for all nurses within the National Health Service. The Staff Side is composed of 41 men and women. They are nominated by the 12 professional organizations and trade unions representing nurses which have seats on this functional council, namely the Royal College of Nursing (12 seats); Royal College of Midwives (6); Association of Hospital Matrons (2); Association of Scottish Hospital Matrons (1); Association of Supervisors of Midwives (1); Scottish Health Visitors Association (1); Women Public Health Officers Association (2); Association of Hospital and Welfare Administrators (1); National and Local Government Officers Association (4); Confederation of Health Service Employees (4); National Union of General and Municipal Workers (3), and the National Union of Public Employees (4).

The chairman, vice-chairman and secretary of the Staff Side are elected from these 41 representatives, and for the first time a nurse has been elected chairman—a midwife has been vice-chairman since the first meeting, and the new secretary, Miss Davies, has been assistant secretary for the past six years, and thus has intimate knowledge of the increasing amount of detailed work required in connection with the salary scales for some 250 different grades of nursing and auxiliary nursing staff in the hospital and public health services within the National Health Service. Salary scales have been agreed and revised for all these groups; conditions of service have yet to be agreed.

The Management Side is composed of 23 men and women representing the nine employing authorities—the Ministry of Health (6 seats); Department of Health for Scotland (2); regional hospital boards for England and Wales (3); for Scotland (1); boards of governors, England and Wales (2); Association of Hospital Management Committees (1); Association of Municipal Corporations (2); County Councils Association (2); London County Council (2), and the Scottish Local Authorities Association (2). In addition to serving on their own functional Whitley Council, representatives of each also serve on the General Council of the Whitley Council for the Health Services, Great Britain, in order to ensure co-ordination between the nine functional councils, which are as follows: Administrative and Clerical Staff; Ancillary; Dental; Medical; Nurses and Midwives; Optical; Pharmaceutical; Professional and Technical A; Professional and Technical B.

Some nurses and midwives have long realized their own responsibility both for service to the community and in the management of their own professional requirements, standards and remuneration. Many, however, still concern themselves only with their own personal work and leave others to be concerned for the advancement of these professions both in educational matters and in working conditions. We must not cease to remind ourselves that if professional status is to be accorded by the public to nursing and midwifery, it can only be as the result of individual nurses and midwives accepting responsibility and carrying it out in ways acceptable to those with whom they work. It is, however, an important step forward that we now have a State-registered nurse with the experience, wisdom and competence to undertake a task as formidable as that of chairman of the Staff Side of the Nurses and Midwives Whitley Council.

Topical Notes

Sir William Gilliatt

NURSES WILL HAVE READ with deep regret of the death in a road accident on September 27 of Sir William Gilliatt, K.C.V.O. He was appointed to the medical staff of the Royal Household more than 20 years ago and attended the Queen at the birth of Prince Charles and Princess Anne, and the Duchess of Kent at the births of her three children. He began a brilliant career as a medical student at The Middlesex Hospital, and his association with King's College Hospital dates from 1916. He was created C.V.O. in 1936 and promoted K.C.V.O. in 1948. He was president of the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists from 1946 to 1949 and president of the Royal Society of Medicine in 1954.

Visit of Miss Marwick to London

MISS IRIS I. MARWICK, of South Africa, has been paying a short visit to London on her return from an assignment as psychiatric nurse consultant to the Far East on behalf of the World Health Organization. At a small reception on September 28, Miss Marwick spoke about her four months' tour, which included India, Malaya, Thailand, the Philippines and Taiwan—all of them countries seeking guidance from WHO on mental health and psychiatric nursing. She had found, contrary to her expectation, that the problems of each country were so different that her experience in one was in no sense a preparation for another. She had been greatly interested in the tremendous variety of the needs expressed by their peoples and was made very conscious of the absence of fellow-members of the 'team' with which she was accustomed to work. In countries with as yet little organized psychiatric care it had surprised her to find that the minds of the people should be turning already to the concept of prevention. She had seen much more than the average visitor of life beneath the outer surface of things, including a picturesque group of aborigines living in a mountain district of Taiwan who were of great interest. She had found everywhere a lack of co-ordination of existing services and this, Miss Marwick felt, was something to which we should all give our attention. Miss E. J. Merry, general superintendent, Queen's Institute of District Nursing, who had been in Malaya prior to Miss Marwick's visit, thanked her on behalf of the guests and endorsed from her own experience the eagerness of Eastern peoples for psychiatric help. Miss Marwick expects to leave England very soon for her home in South Africa, where she is matron of the Tara Hospital, Johannesburg.

Presentation to Mr. Colin Roberts

THE COUNCIL of the Royal College of Nursing, wishing to honour Mr. Colin Roberts, O.B.E., in appreciation of his many years of service to nurses, first on the Rushcliffe Committee and subsequently as chairman of the Staff Side of the Nurses and Midwives Functional Whitley Council, from which he has now retired, will be making a presentation to him in the near future. Registered Male Nurses Conference

THE SOCIETY OF REGISTERED MALE NURSES, LTD. held its annual conference at the Royal College of Nursing on Saturday, September 29, when about 120 delegates were present, and Mr. R. T. Barrow took the chair. The conference was opened by the President, Sir Cecil Wakeley, BT., who presented a scroll of honorary membership to Miss Frances Goodall, general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing who has been granted honorary life membership of the Society of Registered Male Nurses, in recognition of services rendered to the male nursing profession. Miss G. M. Godden, the president of the College, was also present. A report will be published later. On the eve of the Conference, a reception was held in the Cowdray Hall when guests were received by Sir Cecil and Lady Wakeley and Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Barrow.

THE PRINCESS ROYAL VISITS BELFAST

THE Princess Royal was present at the final meeting of the Council of the Appeal Fund of the Royal College of Nursing in Northern Ireland when she visited the headquarters of the Northern Ireland Committee of the College in Belfast on September 28.

The fund, opened in 1949, aimed at raising £50,000; it has brought in £52,709 and the Princess Royal, who made the visit to headquarters at 6, College Gardens her first engagement in her four-day stay in Northern Ireland, warmly congratulated everyone responsible for the appeal on their success, and in particular, Miss Mona Grey, organizing secretary of the College in Northern Ireland, who had not only aided and directed committee work but had on her own initiative written and produced pageants and plays to advance the fund. Miss Grey, the Princess remarked, was "a dynamic force" and she told those assembled "you are more than fortunate to have somebody with the interests of nursing so much at heart."

On arrival Her Royal Highness was welcomed by a guard of uniformed nurses from all branches of the profession in Northern Ireland. She was accompanied by Lady Wakehurst, wife of the Governor of Northern Ireland, patron and president of the College in Northern Ireland, who presented to the Princess Dame Dehra Parker, Minister of Health and Local Government for Northern Ireland, Mrs. J. Mackie, the chairman of the Appeal Fund, and three members of the termination committee of the Fund—Miss Mona Grey, Mrs. R. A. Johnston and Mrs. R. Marshall. The members of the Appeal Council, representing all parts of the province, were presented by Mrs. Mackie.

Welcoming Her Royal Highness, Mrs. Mackie said that they all felt greatly honoured by her visit.

It was their ambition, she said, that the nursing services of Northern Ireland should be second to none.

The Princess Royal planted a flowering prunus tree in the garden to commemorate her visit and was presented with a spray of orchids and two Belleek vases by Miss H. Hudson, matron of the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children.

The PRINCESS ROYAL arriving at the Royal College of Nursing, Belfast, with Mrs. James Mackie, chairman, Northern Ireland Appeal Fund (see also page 1001).

Subsequently the final meeting of the Appeal Council was held. Mrs. A. A. Woodman, the chairman of the Council of the Royal College of Nursing, was present and she paid a high tribute to all the committee members and to Miss Grey for what they had achieved.

When the committee was formally dissolved the members presented to Miss Mona Grey a diamond wristwatch to mark their appreciation of the special contribution that she had made. She was given also an illuminated address to which were appended the names of all who had contributed to the presentation, Lady Wakehurst heading the list. Mrs. James Mackie and Mrs. Robert Marshall were presented with Belleek coffee sets and every member of the committee received a hand-turned wooden bowl as a souvenir.

The Princess Royal also visited the Samaritan Hospital, Belfast. She had laid the foundation stone of the hospital and had visited it on each of her three subsequent visits to the province. Among those presented to her were Sir Frank Montgomery, former chairman of the Northern Ireland Hospitals Authority, Mrs. Oscar Henderson, the chairman of the management committee of the hospital, Miss A. J. Turtle, matron, and Mrs. A. R. Scott, secretary. After touring all the wards Her Royal Highness commented: "this is a cheerful, happy and bright hospital".

A ward sister describes the nursing care of a patient with

by C. ACHESON, S.R.N., S.C.M., WARD SISTERS CERT., Ward Sister, Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast.

ACUTE nephritis is a fairly common disease among children and young adults. The exact cause of the disease is unknown, but it usually follows one to three weeks after a streptococcal infection, such as an attack of tonsillitis, or it may occur as a complication of scarlet fever. Approximately 80 per cent. of all cases recover completely; 5 per cent. may die in the acute stage and the remainder progress to die in uraemia or from gross oedema. There is acute inflammation of the kidney substance, the kidneys becoming red and swollen with small haemorrhages appearing on their surface and in their substance. The glomeruli and tubules show damage. Since the function of the kidneys is to excrete water and the waste products of protein metabolism, which include certain toxic substances and urea, then a state of uraemia occurs when the kidneys are unable to maintain a 'normal internal environment'. This arises when there is imbalance between the rates of intake, or production in the body of chemical substances, and the rate of excretion.

The onset of the disease is usually sudden. The patient complains of headache, pain in the back, vomiting and often constipation. He or his relatives may have noticed puffiness of the face, particularly around the eyes and he may have noticed swelling of the ankles. This oedema tends to be worse in the morning. There is some degree of fever accompanied by an increased pulse rate. The urine is scanty and dark in appearance and on examination shows blood and albumin. The albumin is usually present in large amounts, but microscopic examination is often necessary to demonstrate red blood cells. A variety of casts is also seen. The blood urea is raised and there is hypertension. In severe cases the blood pressure may be extremely high and may be accompanied by severe headache, vomiting, blurring of the vision or even convulsions. In these cases the oedema is usually more marked and may be seen in the legs and the sacral area, and it may even invade the peritoneal and pleural cavities.

The diagnosis is made on the history, symptoms and presence of blood and albumin in the urine associated with oedema. Special investigations carried out by the laboratory include estimation of blood urea which is repeated at intervals throughout the course of the disease, the normal being from 20 to 40 mg. per 100 cc.

Since uraemia includes the states which arise from failure of the kidney to conserve essential substances as well as states due to retention of urinary constituents, the object of treatment is to assist the kidney to re-establish its normal internal environment.

Diet

The aim of diet is, therefore, to exclude protein completely in the early acute stage and to restrict fluids to an amount sufficient for the body to carry on efficiently with metabolism. At the same time sufficient calories in the form of carbohydrate must be provided for the normal metabolism of the body to continue.

In the first 24 hours a basic amount of 700 millilitres (ml.) of fluid in the form of water and fruit juice only is given. This is sufficient to replace the fluid lost from the body in sensible and insensible sweat, in respiration and in defaecation. Calories are provided in the form of glucose added to the fruit drinks. In 24 hours 200 g. of glucose will provide 800 calories, sufficient to nourish the body when lying in bed. It also acts as a protein sparer and tends to prevent a rise in serum potassium, which is dangerous. It is a good method to give the patient 200 ml. of water and fruit juice with glucose, 50 g., and allow him to drink this as desired over the next six-hour period, the full amount being given over the 24 hours. At the same time a strict record of all output must be kept, including vomit and diarrhoea. The most satisfactory method of keeping an accurate record of the urinary output is to place all urine passed during the 24 hours in a Winchester bottle and then to measure the total volume at the end of the period. When the blood urea has fallen below 100 mg. per 100 cc. and the urine volume exceeds 1,000 ml. per day, the patient may be allowed free fluids as desired and an ordinary light diet without added salt. It is important to continue measuring the urine over each 24-hour period to check that the output is maintained.

If, however, in the more severe attacks of the condition the output in the 24 hours is less than 1,000 ml. the fluid diet must be continued, allowing the basic 700 ml. plus an amount equal in volume to the previous day's output of urine and/or vomit and diarrhoea, also giving as before 200 g. of glucose to provide calories. Usually by the end of four or five days the urinary output is satisfactory and the patient may start a light diet, low in sodium and containing, to start with, approximately 20 g. of protein, later increasing up to 70 g. with an abundance of carbohydrate and fat so that the value of the diet is about 2,000 calories daily. At the end of this article are diet sheets showing examples of diets containing 19 g., 29 g., 39 g. and 69 g. of protein.

General Nursing Care

The patient is nursed in bed and encouraged to rest as much as possible until all signs of abnormality of renal process have disappeared. The most commonly used indications of activity are temperature, blood sedimentation rate and examination of the urine for cells and casts. Occasionally albuminuria and/or hypertension and oedema may persist indefinitely. In this case he will be allowed up at the discretion of the doctor. It is important that a simple explanation of the condition and an outline of treatment be given to the patient so that he can understand and co-operate and be free as far as possible from anxiety about his illness.

The patient is admitted into a warm bed, in a warm but well-ventilated ward free from draughts. He may be nursed in the recumbent or semi-recumbent position, whichever he finds more comfortable. While there is some degree of pyrexia, frequent sponging of the skin and change of clothing is essential. Special attention must also be paid to the pressure areas. The oedema will lessen the vitality of the skin and the moisture from perspiration may predispose towards bedsores. The position of the patient must therefore be changed frequently and the pressure areas treated every four hours. In the early stages when fluid is restricted and no solid food is being given, the mouth requires attention at regular intervals. It is cleaned with sodium bicarbonate solution, glycerine and borax and frequent mouthwashes. Barley sugar or glucose sweets may be given to suck. The bowels are kept freely open, if necessary with a mild aperient such as an agar preparation. Excessive purging must be avoided as it only distresses the patient. The temperature, pulse and respirations are recorded twice daily. A daily record of blood pressure and the amount of albumin present in the urine is kept as well as a fluid balance chart.

Discomfort caused by headaches may be relieved by calcium aspirin, gr. 10—15. Excessive vomiting may be treated with chlorpromazine, 25 mg., given intramuscularly two or three times daily. Rest and sleep are important. A sedative such as butobarbitone, gr. 3, may be ordered at night by the doctor.

After the first week the patient usually feels fairly well and diversional therapy such as reading, handicrafts or other such pastimes in which the patient may be interested, should be encouraged.

Since bed rest plays a major part in treatment the patient usually remains in bed in hospital under supervision for three to four weeks, then goes home under the care of his own doctor. About one month later he returns for a full medical check-up. His blood pressure is recorded, his urine tested for albumin and he is examined for oedema or any other signs of incomplete recovery.

Complications of the disease which may occur include renal failure causing uraemia, cerebral upset associated with high blood pressure, progressive oedema, secondary infections such as pneumonia, anaemia due to blood loss and toxaemia affecting the blood-forming organs.

Modern Gynaecology with Obstetrics for Nurses

—by W. E. Hector and John Howkins, M.D., F.R.C.S. (William Heinemann Medical Books Limited, 99, Great Russell Street, London, W.C.1, 17s. 6d.)

This is an excellent textbook for the student nurse, giving in a concise form a complete picture of the subject with the human aspect well to the fore.

The importance of the mother's understanding of the changing personality of her daughter at puberty is very well stressed; also the warning about irregular bleeding associated with the menopause. One cannot help feeling that many lives and much unhappiness could be saved if these points were always uppermost in the mind of the trained nurse.

The illustrations are of outstanding quality and the whole presentation of the text is most attractive and would be a valuable addition to one's collection.

Children in Hospital

Paediatrics for the General Hospital Nurse.—by Margaret M. Leach, S.R.N., R.S.C.N., with a foreword by Victoria Smallpeice, M.A., F.R.C.P. (Faber and Faber Limited, 24, Russell Square, London, W.C.2, 9s. 6d.)

At first glance it might be felt that here is a book which should be welcomed by the ward sister with the often difficult task of introducing nurses in general training to the special problems and atmosphere of the children's ward. As one turns the pages, however, doubts arise about the usefulness of the book and these doubts remain with the reader to the very end.

Some books say too little to be of value to those they are intended for, some attempt to say more than can reasonably be expected to be contained within one small volume. In a way this book has both these faults. For short reference with regard to certain conditions and unfamiliar names, a dictionary would seem as suitable; for more detailed information it would, of course, be essential to go to a proper textbook on the subject. To introduce the student nurse to the mere 'atmosphere' a tiny pamphlet would serve as well, and there is at least one excellent pamphlet of this kind available. It is, however, in this respect that the author succeeds best. She undoubtedly has a real love for her work and conveys this well to the reader. The students' approach will be the better for studying the introductory chapter.

Apart from this the author only touches on the fringe of her subject, even though the contents include chapters on the development of the child, diseases of the newly born and premature infant, infant feeding and congenital malformations. Mention is also made of a large number of diseases and abnormalities commonly seen in the average children's ward. Some of these are illustrated but although clear, these illustrations are singularly unattractive.

The book concludes with a chapter on special procedures, such as subcutaneous infusion and duodenal intubation. The description of these should be very helpful to both nurses and medical students.

They Did Not Pass By

The Story of the Early Pioneers of Nursing.—by Denis G. Murphy. (Longmans Green and Co. Limited, 7, Clifford Street, London, W.1, 10s. 6d.)

Let me say at once that this little book could be a useful addition to the reading list of a student of the history of nursing, but that it could not possibly be used as a textbook by the student nurse nor as a reference book by her teacher. It is a highly condensed account of the care of the sick since the days of the early Christians, written, according to the publishers, with " special appeal for nurses and members of the medical and kindred professions. The treatment is non-technical which brings the book well within the range of other readers ". But in trying to maintain his balance, the author has fallen between two stools.

The most irritating thing about the book (even to one who is a convert to Catholicism) is its bias. Modern terms commonly used in the health service have been used as chapter headings, and the author has tried to fit certain things done in the mediaeval church into these headings. While it may be true that there is nothing new under the sun, it is asking just a little too much to expect us to believe that St. Vincent's 'country girls' were the forerunners of the modern health visitor. The author's ideas about the functions of certain groups of people who are called nurses needs to be clarified and he needs to be told that the modern nurse is first of all a teacher of health and secondly a giver of care.

Granted also that the second phase of nursing began with the religious orders, it must also be remembered that there are countries where today, because of their very selflessness, the religious orders are stultifying the progress of those who want to make nursing their profession outside a religious order. It seems to be 'drawing a long bow' to claim the Mistress of Novices as the first sister tutor, when every nurse knows that sister tutors did not exist until the battle for registration had been won. Nor can we agree that the best way of tackling the problem (unhappily still with us) of the unmarried mother is by arranging suitable marriages. Suitable to whom?

The best things in the book and the most valuable from the sister tutor's point of view are the appendix and the bibliography. Interesting chapters are those on Gheel, St. Vincent de Paul and the geriatric work of the Little Sisters of the Poor, all of which needs no apologist since the work speaks for itself. Finally, one wonders who chose the cover—it certainly does not fit the contents.

Mentally Handicapped Children

A Handbook for Parents. (National Association for Mental Health, 39, Queen Anne Street, London, W.1, 6s.)

This handbook for parents follows a long series of pamphlets, all with a purpose, that of assisting the families of the mentally afflicted or the public to understand them. The four contributors have written in an easy to understand manner, and any parent cannot help but derive valuable information on her attitude towards her burdened child and hints on how to begin the early training. The appendix tells how to obtain help from such people as the local authority and this information cannot be repeated too often as many people are still not aware of the facilities that are provided.

The outer cover is attractive in design but I was less happy with some of the drawings in the text. Nurses, and particularly health visitors, need have no hesitation in recommending this book to any family with such a problem.

MINISTRY OF SUPPLY MEDICAL SERVICES EXHIBITION

Williams, senior sister at the Explosives Research and Development Establishment, Waltham Abbey.* Right: *the Ambulance Service stand. On the left is Miss V. TWO years ago an exhibition illustrating the medical services of the Ministry of Supply was arranged for the first time in the offices of the Ministry in their new premises at St. Giles Court, Holborn. This year a much more ambitious exhibition has been staged with outstanding success in the handsome setting of the Pillar Hall, Board of Trade and Air Ministry Building, Horseguards Avenue, Whitehall, and was formally opened on September 24 by Sir Cyril Musgrave, K.C.B., Permanent Secretary, Ministry of Supply, in the presence of many well-known members of the industrial, medical and nursing services and others. Speaking of the wide extent of activities undertaken by the Ministry of Supply, Sir Cyril stressed the importance of an efficient medical service and its influence in securing good industrial relations. He paid tribute to Dr. Langdon Lloyd and his medical and nursing colleagues for their willingness that others should see their work as revealed through the exhibition. Many people in many of the Ministry's factories and other establishments helped in preparing material and photographs; some items were lent by other Government Departments and by the makers of protective, diagnostic and therapeutic apparatus. In a series of bays round the hall members of the Ministry's staff, including a number of senior sisters in uniform, were at hand to supplement the information printed beside the exhibits, which were classified into appropriate groupings. The first was concerned with medical examination for placement including all the apparatus for testing and fitting the man to the job, record forms and a model of a pre-employment centre. The next bay dealt with the various hazards to be met with and these were developed in other sections from the angle of protection and prevention—the whole arranged on simple, well-proportioned stands with clear text cards mounted on backgrounds of pleasing colour. Those who took the opportunity to visit the exhibition last week were well rewarded; others who missed it should look forward to a future opportunity.

A Case Study

THE STORY OF MARGARET

by ANNE YOUNG, Student Nurse, Guy's Hospital, London.

MARGARET J. was admitted to Elizabeth Ward in an unconscious state on July 31. She was a well-built child of 13 years, approximately 5 ft. 2 in. in height and 8 st. in weight. Margaret had been found by her twin sister in the bath with her head completely under water—respirations had ceased. After administration of artificial respiration by her father she began to breathe again. Margaret was then admitted to hospital. Her condition was critical. Her temperature was 102°F., pulse 120, respirations 56. She was cyanosed, respirations shallow and extremely difficult and she was having severe generalized convulsions; in these Margaret became completely spastic, frothed at the mouth and clenched her teeth. Sometimes her limbs jerked violently. As she was a known epileptic a diagnosis of status epilepticus was made with the added complication of drowning.

Before Margaret and her twin were born, their mother had toxaemia of pregnancy accompanied by eclampsia. Before, during and after the delivery of the twins their mother had eclamptic convulsions. Until the age of five Margaret's behaviour in no way resembled that of an epileptic. She had one intractable habit—nail-biting. On occasions their mother had detected jealousy, for Margaret's twin is superior in looks and intelligence, but she has never suffered from epilepsy. In her fifth year Margaret had her first attack of petit mal. This caused her to go into a trance but she did not fall or micturate. On some days she had as many as 20 of these attacks.

First Major Convulsions

In July 1952 when Margaret was 11 years old she had her first major epileptic attack. This was preceded by attacks of petit mal from which she was now to suffer only as a precursor of a major attack. Major convulsions were characterized by falling to the ground, shaking and saliva running from her mouth. This condition would last from two to three minutes after which the child would sleep and on waking would feel perfectly well. Her own doctor prescribed phenobarbitone, gr. $\frac{1}{2}$ four times a day, and referred her to a neurologist who arranged an electro-encephalogram. This was recorded and showed the specific pattern of idiopathic epilepsy. Margaret has continued to have convulsions at the rate of 8-10 a year, the longest intervals between attacks being three months. Six weeks before entering hospital she had had an attack. A paternal cousin suffers from convulsion.

On examination the patient was cyanosed, râles could be detected all over the chest and her respirations were "bubbly". Inhalation of water was obvious, but to what extent Margaret had suffered from cerebral anoxia was unknown. Phenobarbitone, gr. 1 by intramuscular injection, was ordered in an attempt to control convulsions, with penicillin (saline), 1,000,000 units, and atropine, gr. $\frac{1}{150}$ to combat chest infection and to attempt to check fluid in the lungs. The patient was put into an oxygen tent and efforts were made to keep her sitting upright. This proved difficult and interfering with her position seemed to precipitate further convulsions.

Half an hour after administration of phenobarbitone the convulsions showed no signs of decreasing so a further grain was given by intramuscular injection. This also was ineffective, so 8 drachms of paraldehyde in a 10 oz. solution of normal saline was given rectally (maximum dose for approximately 8 st.). The result was instantaneous—Margaret fell into a deeper state of unconsciousness—convulsions ceased. Nevertheless temperature, pulse and respirations, which were being recorded half-hourly, rose steadily until 1 a.m. when her temperature was 103°F., pulse 170, respirations 72. Her airway tended to become blocked with mucus and often she had to be held over the side of her bed to clear it. An electric sucker was at the bedside for use when required. This was the turning point of the night for Margaret. After 1 a.m. her condition gradually improved, until by 7 a.m. her temperature, pulse and respirations were steady at 99°F., 120 and 40 respectively. Phenobarbitone gr. 1, saline penicillin, 500,000 units, and atropine, gr. $\frac{1}{150}$, six-hourly, were ordered until further notice. Throughout her stay in hospital, paraldehyde was used to control these attacks.

Constant and Careful Nursing

It was rapidly becoming evident that the nursing of this child would prove a challenge. Blisters appeared on her right ear and wrist. These were successfully treated with lotio rubra, and in order to avoid further pressure symptoms Margaret was nursed flat using four positions in rotation, that is, left lateral, right lateral, when a pillow was used to support her back and upper arm, and a modified form of Simm's position, on both left and right sides with a pillow in front of her to prevent her from turning completely to the prone position. According to her position a hard pillow was used. The supine position was avoided for foot-drop threatened, aided by spasm of the plantar extensors. A cradle was place at the foot of the bed to take the weight of the bedclothes. Her position was changed, and all pressure areas treated and massaged hourly, as she was incontinent. Throughout, a tray containing mouth gag, sponge holders, tongue forceps and a peg was by her bed, and mouth toilet was performed hourly, with special attention to her lips which soon became swollen through biting them.

As Margaret's convulsions were extremely exhausting it was vital that this unconscious child should receive adequate nourishment and fluid, but she had no swallowing reflex. Intravenous and subcutaneous infusion were out of the question for she was too restless, so nasal feeding was attempted, but passing the tube caused increased violence of attacks. This method was abandoned in favour of rectal feeding using normal saline and glucose 5% in normal saline alternately.

By the end of the first day, all râles in Margaret's chest had disappeared. On the fourth day, opisthotonos occurred for the first time, and at one point during a convulsion Margaret's spine was extended to such an extent that her feet were only inches from her head. Yet another new sign appeared—she now emitted high-pitched cries during convulsions. This, the fourth day, was the most exhausting day Margaret endured. She had 16 convulsions—two being prolonged attacks. Chest X-ray on the following day showed an opacity at the base of the left lung and a pleural rub was detected over this area and her temperature was swinging. Another antibiotic was ordered—terramycin, 100 mg., was given intramuscularly six-hourly.

On the seventh day there was evidence of proctitis. Rectal feeding and rectal paraldehyde were discontinued. Paraldehyde was given intramuscularly and an attempt made to give Margaret fluid by mouth, but her state of unconsciousness was such that during the 24 hours after discontinuing rectal feeding, she took only 2 oz. orally.

Weight loss was becoming evident and it was necessary to resume rectal feeding—with due caution—on the following day. Paraldehyde continued to be given, intramuscularly, four-hourly, and phenobarbitone was increased to gr. 4 daily. This was also given intramuscularly. Cellulitis occurred, so care had to be taken in choosing injection sites. Foot-drop, in spite of precautions, was now marked, due to definite spasticity in the plantar extensors. Physiotherapy and corrective splints were prescribed for this condition.

Further Tests

On the ninth day Margaret had 15 convulsions and in an attempt to inhibit them phenobarbitone was increased to gr. 6 daily, but on the following day she had eight convulsions so phenobarbitone was decreased to gr. 4. Margaret was seen by her physician and neurologist on this day. A systolic murmur was detected but her chest condition had completely cleared. The neurologist queried the possibility of a tubercular infection, so a lumbar puncture was performed. A blood-stained specimen of cerebro-spinal fluid (C.S.F.) was withdrawn and pressure was inconstant—rising to 285 mm. The pathological report on the C.S.F. showed its contents to be within normal limits and a culture for acid-fast bacilli was negative.

Margaret's neurologist suspected cerebral oedema and in an attempt to relieve this, a hypertonic solution of 25% sucrose was given intravenously. Lumbar puncture two days later showed a drop in C.S.F. pressure to 70 mm. which was constant. Examination showed that the systolic murmur had disappeared. Intravenous hypertonic sucrose was to be given daily until further notice. Margaret's state of unconsciousness was lessening gradually for she now began to resent the intravenous injection. This was discontinued after five days, for Margaret had ceased to have convulsions. Phenobarbitone was decreased to gr. 2 daily, for it had been decided to allow her to progress from narcosis into consciousness. Methoin, 0.1 g. daily, was ordered.

Margaret now developed a habit of rolling her head ceaselessly from side to side for long periods. This caused her hair to become matted and tangled and abrasions appeared on her face where she had banged it on the pillow. These abrasions were successfully treated with zinc and oleum ricini. She now began to open her eyes and gaze in front of her. She did not speak and although her parents and family visited her daily, she showed no signs of recognizing any of them. Needless to say, this was a distressing situation. Occasionally her gaze would follow one as one walked round her bed—but this could not be depended upon.

Convulsions had now ceased but Margaret was still very restless and alternated between being very hot and very cold. Though conscious she was still incontinent, and though her swallowing reflex had returned, it was with great perseverance that she took 17 oz. in 24 hours, so rectal feeding was still used to complement her intake. When solid food was put into her mouth she literally did not know what to do with it. Consequently her diet consisted of fortified drinks such as Bournvita containing Casilan and glucose, and orange juice with glucose.

Mother Assists with Nursing

After a consultation between physician and neurologist, it was decided that Margaret's recovery would be aided by her mother's presence. This was arranged and her mother came each morning and helped to blanket-bath her. So that her mother could visit her more frequently Margaret was moved to a side ward. Throughout, the patient had a nurse with her day and night.

Gradually her diet was increased and calorie values were estimated. We aimed to give her 2,000 calories each day. This we did; she eventually progressed to a normal diet. Thirty-one days after admission Margaret began to take obvious interest in her surroundings. Chlorpromazine hydrochloride (Largactil), 25 mg. twice daily, was ordered. Four weeks later she said her first word, and two weeks after this could speak haltingly—saying "Better, doctor". Sixteen weeks after admission Margaret could stand with aid—much credit for this is due to the conscientious efforts of her physiotherapists. The chlorpromazine hydrochloride was omitted. There was still rigidity of the limbs, and Margaret occasionally suffered from ptosis and divergence of the eyes, also she whimpered and grimaced. But gradually she became more alert and responsive, though she showed signs of an almost animal fear—crying out when approached; this improved as she began to have faith in those around her. The only drug she now took was methoin 0.16 g.

Margaret's mother, who was with her as much as possible, noticed that she became singularly fretful before being incontinent; with much fuss Margaret was persuaded to use a bedpan and by January she was completely continent of urine and faeces.

Physiotherapy continued and gradually she began to walk—in the walking machine and then between parallel bars. Margaret became mentally more alert day by day. She recognized all her family, and knew their names and ages. She remembered how to read but cannot yet write. Her speech is still halting in character but she is gradually forming longer sentences. Though for her age Margaret is mentally subnormal, she is remarkably alert. When it was asked of her what she had been doing at the physiotherapy department she replied—"Walking—obviously"!

Margaret has had no further convulsions since the 13th day after admission. Now, six months later, it is thought that the area of the brain that stimulated the convulsions was destroyed by the cerebral anoxia Margaret suffered through drowning. It is hoped re-education will prove successful.

Margaret is now at school at the seaside, and is top of her class in French. Her abilities have been carefully assessed by a psychologist and are pronounced normal, her difficulty being mainly due to imperfect power of articulation. There has been a deposit of bone in the muscles in the neighbourhood of the hip joint, which mechanically interferes with walking, but it is being gradually absorbed. The physician considers that this change occurred while the legs were in a spastic state. Further improvement may be expected for at least a year.

I should like to express my thanks to Dr. H. St. C. Vertue for his permission to publish this case study.

DANISH STUDENT NURSES SEE LONDON

ON one of the few sunny mornings this June, 26 Danish nurses accompanied by some of their English hostesses and Student Nurses' Association staff assembled at the Royal College of Nursing for a coach tour of London.

Miss Walsh, who is good with historical dates, and Miss Thyer, who knows London well, had volunteered to act as guides. After spending 10 minutes in Cavendish Square in a complete traffic jam when we began to think we should get no further, we made our way down Regent Street. Then the mike went wrong, and Miss Walsh's voice, calling out the names of famous shops, changed to a high-pitched scream. The driver lazily pulled in and tried to put this right before we stopped all the traffic again. He was quite unsuccessful and we proceeded, with Miss Walsh and Miss Thyer taking it in turns to call out places of interest.

Across Trafalgar Square, up the Strand, round Aldwych and into Fleet Street. The big newspaper offices were passed, and some excitement was expressed at seeing Reuters.

Going up Ludgate Hill we were reminded of the Plague of London; then past St. Paul's. We did not stop here as many of the Danish girls had already visited the Cathedral. Many Danes had their first glimpse of the results of the bombing of London. As we entered the City of London we were able to point out the many new blocks of offices. Up Cannon Street and past the Monument, Miss Thyer murmuring that she could not remember why it was built, but being hastily reminded that it was to commemorate the Fire of London, 1666.

We stopped at the Tower of London and were greeted by the Beefeaters. Everyone was enchanted with the Crown Jewels, and the English girls had to think hard over the origin of some of the Orders. We then went into the Latimer Tower and were suitably horrified over the instruments of torture. We ended our tour watching the Changing of the Guard when cameras were all to the front.

Then on over Tower Bridge, creeping in another traffic block, over London Bridge, then back into Blackfriars and along the embankment, seeing Cleopatra's Needle, the Discovery, Royal Festival Hall, County Hall, and the landing stage where the river boats could be boarded, as several girls hoped to have time to sail down the river to Greenwich before they left. We went slowly past the Houses of Parliament, and noted Oliver Cromwell's statue, then up Whitehall.

Most of the girls knew the history of the Cenotaph, and they all knew Downing Street. Down Pall Mall and past the Florence Nightingale and Sidney Herbert Memorial. Past Marlborough House and St. James's Palace. Up St. James's Street into Piccadilly and Hyde Park Corner. By this time our guides were losing their voices, and the English nurses were pointing out places of interest. The coach circled Buckingham Palace grounds and turned up Buckingham Palace Road to cross the front of the Palace before making its way back to the Royal College of Nursing.

So ended a comprehensive tour of historic London. We can only hope our Danish guests did not take back a too jumbled account of London. London did look beautiful that day with the sun shining on ruins and new buildings alike. Both were gay with flowers. The bombed areas still grew wild flowers, and the offices had brilliant coloured plants in window-boxes. The parks were at their best and looked a green oasis in the middle of London.

We Londoners felt proud to show our foreign visitors our still rather battered, but gay old city on such a lovely day.

At the National Gallery

ANOTHER of the diversions arranged for the Danish students was a conducted visit to the National Gallery, Trafalgar Square, on Wednesday afternoon, June 13.

Mr. Clare of the National Gallery gave a straightforward and enlightening talk on Italian art in the 14th and 15th centuries. This talk was given in one of the newly decorated, air-conditioned rooms which were shortly to be opened to the public. The supply of canvas folding stools enabled the students to enjoy the talk very comfortably. After Italian art, Mr. Clare spoke particularly of the Venetian School, explaining the differences.

After this conducted tour, the students were at liberty to view other exhibits in the gallery. Altogether it was a very pleasant afternoon, and Mr. Clare was warmly thanked.

A Tour of Woodberry Down Health Centre

ON June 13, I was one of four student nurses from London hospitals who, with a group of Danish students visiting this country, went with Miss Walsh of the Student Nurses' Association to Woodberry Down Health Centre. It is one of only three in this country, a large modern building in spacious grounds, situated in north-west London. As soon as we saw it we were impressed and our interest was aroused. We were shown round by a health visitor, who gave us a short preliminary talk on the work of health centres.

Among the various departments we saw were the antenatal and postnatal clinics where the patients also receive dental treatment. We were then shown the dental department, which also treats all children up to 16 years of age. We were very interested to see the consulting-rooms used by the six general practitioners who hold their surgeries at the centre, and also the small theatre in which they perform minor operations.

The health visitor told us about the work of the child psychiatrist, but we were unfortunately unable to visit that department as a clinic was in progress. We heard about the part the centre plays in the health education of the public, and our attention was drawn to the many attractive posters displayed everywhere, and to a list of lectures being held for expectant mothers.

We finally visited a day nursery attached to the centre. Here there were no language difficulties, and our Danish colleagues quickly made friends with the children.

I feel sure that each member of the group found the visit to Woodberry Down Health Centre most enjoyable, and we English students will follow its future and, we hope, that of many other such centres with great interest.

Windsor, Eton and Hampton Court

A TOUR of Eton, Windsor and Hampton Court had been arranged for our Danish colleagues, and we were also very pleased as we had never been there ourselves! We left headquarters at 9.30 a.m. feeling rather doubtful about the weather as the Danish girls had hardly seen the sun since they arrived.

Places of interest were described over a loudspeaker in Danish and English; and as we left London our driver gave us an unexpected thrill by driving past London Airport. We approached Eton, and the sun came out allowing us to see this seat of learning at its best. Our friends were very amused to see little boys of eight or nine in black striped trousers and tails, and promptly took numerous photographs.

As we came towards Windsor, we could see the ancient Castle in all its glory set high above the surrounding countryside. After a packed lunch in the coach, we climbed the steep street to the castle and explored the various places of interest, though all of us decided that the most enjoyable was a conducted tour of St. George's Chapel. This was of special topical interest as there was to be a service for the installation of three new Knights of the Garter on the following Saturday when the Queen would be in residence. Our Danish friends were pleased to see where their king sat when he was installed.

We were loath to leave Windsor, but the afternoon was almost gone, and we had yet to visit Hampton Court. We saw many interesting things in the State Apartments, and in the beautifully kept grounds, but I think the thing which most people enjoyed was the famous clock which records the time, date, season, etc.

Our Danish friends livened the journey home by singing folk songs, and it was a very tired but thoroughly happy crowd of nurses who arrived back at headquarters in the evening.

Visit to Burton-on-Trent

TWO Danish student nurses, Miss Birgit Albertus and Miss Birthe Praest, visited the General Hospital, Burton-on-Trent, and were met at the station on Saturday, June 17, by five members of the Student Nurses' Association Unit, including the chairman, Miss Doreen Roberts, the secretary, Miss Diana Puryer, and the treasurer, Miss Joan Baldwin. The guests were taken to Holford House (the nurses home) where they were greeted by matron.

After lunch the party was taken to the children's medical ward by matron, where sister introduced the guests to the small patients, and as a birthday tea was in progress during the visit, the guests joined in for a short while and extended their greetings. From there the guests went to the operating theatre and were introduced to the staff nurse who conducted them around the three theatre units.

The weather was not very pleasant and the guests were taken in the evening to the cinema to see the film The Feminine Touch

After breakfast in bed on Sunday morning, the guests were accompanied by members of the Unit on a very pleasant walk alongside the River Trent, to the beautiful gardens at Stapenhill and to the hills to see the lovely valley. This was followed by luncheon and tea at the home of Miss Roberts and her family, and a very happy day ended by accompanying the family to the service at a village church and returning by car through the beautiful country lanes of South Staffordshire.

On Monday the guests visited the ophthalmic unit of the hospital, where sister explained the work of her department, including theatre, casualty, outpatient and ward work. Later a visit was made to an exhibition of pottery at the art gallery and museum. The afternoon was spent, by kind permission of the principal, at the Burton-on-Trent Technical College, where the guests saw

BRITISH STUDENT NURSES VISIT DENMARK

DURING June a party of Danish student nurses visited Great Britain, and on August 16 a party of 24 British student nurses set off from Waterloo Air Terminal to make a return visit. The object of this visit was twofold: on the one hand it was to be a vacation, while on the other the students were to go to Danish hospitals to observe and compare general nursing standards in Denmark with those of this country. The arrangements for the trip were made by the Student Nurses' Association in Great Britain together with the Student Nurses Category Committee of the Danish Council of Nurses. They proved to be most comprehensive, both professionally and socially.

The first week of the visit was spent in Copenhagen, and during the second week the student nurses, in pairs, all went to stay in hospitals in different provinces of Denmark, so that between them they visited a very large part of the country. The pattern of the visit seemed to fall into three distinct parts: first professional (this part included living in hospital and working for at least three mornings in the wards), secondly visits of professional interest, and thirdly social activities.

The arrangements for the second week in Copenhagen were made locally by the student nurses unit and were extremely varied. On their return to Great Britain the student nurses all wrote reports on their visit, and this article has been compiled from their reports.

Welcome to Copenhagen

It was a group of rather apprehensive young women who alighted from the airport bus at Dagmarhus, the air terminal in Copenhagen but they were immediately and warmly welcomed by Miss Voigt, the secretary of the Danish Student Nurses Category Committee, who with the help of a Danish student nurse installed everyone into a fleet of taxis and carried them off to the Copenhagen Municipal Hospital. Here Miss Voigt divided the party up into threes, introducing each trio to their Danish hostesses who took them to the hospitals which were going to be their homes for the next week. From that moment until they boarded the plane to go home the British student nurses were overwhelmed with Danish hospitality wherever they went. As one of the party remarked: "This is just like staying with one's favourite relations."

That night the British visitors were entertained by the student nurses units in the hospitals they were staying at. Some were taken to the circus, some went on a boat trip round the city on the canals, others were taken to dinner at the best restaurant in Copenhagen. Everyone went to bed late that night, but all were up in good time next morning to go to matron's office. After meeting the matron and being issued with a uniform as worn by the student nurses in that training school, they were each taken by a Danish student to her ward.

Here they were introduced to the ward sister, who was most helpful, and they spent the morning working with the Danish students. Most of the nurses and a large number of very interested patients spoke English, and if they had no English then sign language was used satisfactorily. Through this and subsequent ward visits both in Copenhagen and the provinces, the student nurses made some interesting comparisons of nursing methods. Many things were different, but it was clearly seen that the most important person in all the hospitals was the patient, and every effort was made to make the patient's stay in hospital as pleasant and as short as the circumstances permitted.

The first thing to surprise the British eye was the Danish bed. These beds were indeed very different, and bedmaking was a simple operation compared with that in Britain. The bottom of the bed was covered by a sheet which was firmly tucked in and pinned to the hair mattress. On top of this sheet was placed a jaconet-type draw-macintosh covered with a drawsheet. At the bottom of the bed there was placed a pad to protect the feet from the bottom of the bed, while the head and shoulders rested against a large square pillow. The patient was covered by a dyne, pronounced ' doona '. This is an eiderdown made of a feather down mixture covered by a light ticking, the whole being covered with a large white case rather like a mattress cover, which could be changed and laundered when required. During bedmaking this cover was shaken and patted into shape, a very quick operation compared with folding blankets and counterpanes and mitring the corners. It was very noticeable that bedmaking was rapidly accomplished, and also that there was practically no dust and fluff left on the floor afterwards. This type of bed covering was warm, light, and allowed even the most feeble patient free movement under his bedcovers.

The State Hospital, Copenhagen.

In practically every hospital visited the patients wore hospital clothing. This, we were told, ensured that each patient received a change of clothes whenever necessary without having to rely on his or her visitors, and also prevented the individual's personal clothing being lost.

By the side of each bed there stood the usual locker. In some hospitals they were of the cupboard type with which we are familiar, but in others they were more like small trolleys, and on the bottom shelf of these the patient's bedpan and urinal was kept. Frequently the lockers incorporated a bedtable fitment, but bedtables as we know them in Britain were rarely seen. Each patient had a glass of iced water by his bedside, which was refilled at regular intervals throughout the day. In some hospitals the ice was delivered to the wards each morning while in others each ward had a tap which supplied the water ready iced. In each hospital every patient's glass was covered by a chromium-plated lid.

Patients' Entertainment

For the patient's personal entertainment most beds were supplied with a radio rather like a pillowphone, and in some hospitals each evening a sing-song was conducted by loudspeaker. Most hospitals had a library for the patients, and newspapers were delivered daily. Visiting hours for adults were extensive, friends and relatives were welcome both in the afternoon and the evening every day. Children on the other hand had, as far as we could ascertain, visiting twice a week at the most.

It seemed to be the general practice for each patient to be undressed, bathed and put into bed in the admission room, and in some of the wards visited bed-bathing did not appear to take place, the majority of the patients being taken in their beds to a central bathroom, while the ambulant patients walked there.

Generally speaking the beds were very easily moved. A piece of equipment which was much in evidence was a bed elevator or jack with pneumatically-tyred wheels, which was fitted on to a bed when it had to be moved.

The patients' daily routine seemed very similar to that in Britain, and on the whole the patients were wakened between five and six in the morning; breakfast was served at 7.30 a.m. and often consisted of a porridge made of beer and oatmeal, rolls and butter and coffee. A cooked meal was given at midday, and at 6 p.m. supper which consisted mainly of smorrbrød, the open sandwiches which are such a feature of the Danish table. Some of the students were at first concerned, feeling that the more active patients needed more cooked food, but as the holiday passed by they realized that the patients' meals in hospital followed the national pattern of eating.

The majority of hospitals in Denmark are modern buildings, indeed the oldest hospital in Denmark was built in 1910, which is young by British standards, and the age of the buildings is reflected in their layout. The wards usually occupy one floor of a wing of the building. The centre of the floor is a long corridor, and on one side there is a series of small wards having from four to 12 beds. These rooms are high and have a maximum number of windows which look out on to a pleasant garden; the walls are painted white or cream, but this is relieved by the flowers and plants which are such a feature of Danish interior decoration.

On the opposite side of the corridor are the sister's office, the kitchen, the linen rooms, the sluice, and often a treatment room. Quite frequently there is also a staff sitting-room which is used for mid-morning coffee.

Each ward has its day-room. These are in constant use by the patients. They are delightfully and comfortably furnished, on the walls there are pictures which are frequently originals by well-known artists, there are books, cards, chess men, a wireless set, and often a television set although television is still young in Denmark.

The British student nurses were interested in the small ward units. Some felt that it would be difficult to observe the patients as fully as possible, while some felt that it was better for the patients to become members of a small group rather than a large one. It was noticed that this arrangement did make for elasticity in the admission of patients as it was the custom to have a surgical or medical ward in which men, women, and children were nursed, and the smaller units did facilitate admission in that a unit of four beds could be used for either sex according to need.

Contact between the nurses and the patients was usually maintained by a bell and light system. Each patient had his own bellpush which was placed on his bed; when he needed the nurse he rang his bell and a red light appeared over the bed, and another one over the ward door. When the nurse answering the bell entered the unit she switched the outside light from red to green so that other members of the staff would know that there was a nurse in the ward attending to the patient.

It was very noticeable to the British nurses that during the entire visit they did not once see any screens or bed-curtains. It was the custom throughout to give the patient any attention or treatment in full view of the other patients. Some of the students said that the Danes did not appear to show any apprehension, and they wondered whether this was because they could see all the treatments being carried out. Seriously ill patients, particularly post-operative cases, were, however, nursed in recovery rooms which were staffed by specially trained nurses, and it was here that the bulk of intravenous therapy was performed, and where unconscious or very ill people were nursed until they were considered fit to return to the routine of the ward. Patients who were about to die were always nursed in a single room, and these rooms were often in pairs with a communicating door so that one nurse could look after two patients if it became necessary.

Sister's office was similar to many offices in this country. There was a large filing cabinet for the patients' notes, and sometimes the drug cupboard was also in the office. An interesting feature of one hospital was the metal stamp which was made for each patient on admission bearing his name, address, age and other information. This stamp was always used for filling in forms and charts, providing easily read headings for each occasion. Sister or a staff nurse seemed to fill in the patients' charts. Only the patients who were very ill had the respirations counted. Four-hourly charts were not seen, and it was interesting to note that the patient's temperature was always taken either in the groin or the rectum, with of course a centigrade thermometer which was larger and flatter than the clinical thermometers in use here.

The Danes refer to their sluice as the scullery, and apart from the fact that each patient had his own bedpan marked with his bed number, any difference between us ends. The treatment rooms are well equipped, and in many instances hot air ovens are used instead of water sterilizers for instruments and bowls.

There appeared to be very few trolleys; on average each ward seemed to have only one trolley which was mainly used as an examination trolley. When the staff gave a patient any treatment they used a tray, or quite frequently carried the equipment in their hands. This was not slackness but was the custom throughout. Masks were conspicuous by their absence, but paper towels and cabinets of roller towelling of the pull-through variety were very common. When dressings were performed the non-touch technique was always observed, but frequently absorbent tissues were used to cover wounds instead of gauze. Almost invariably sutures and clips were removed from wounds by a medical officer.

The kitchens were always beautifully clean, and dominated by a huge refrigerator which, as in Britain, not only housed food and milk but antibiotics as well. All the wards had electrically heated food trolleys, and many of them had hot cupboards so that a supply of really hot plates was always available. The children's wards also had large sterilizers for boiling china and cutlery after use.

The domestic staff seemed to take a great pride in their work, and many of them had been in the same ward for years. In the democratic Danish society domestic work is on a par with any other work socially, and this leads to a very good atmosphere between all grades of staff.

The theatres were full of up-to-date equipment from Germany, Scandinavia and Britain. It was to us rather unusual to see only the people actually working at the operating table wearing gowns and masks, while the runners merely wore a mask and their everyday uniform. Great care was taken to see that everyone entering the theatre wore rubber-soled clogs on their feet to prevent any danger from static electricity.

The training of the nurses follows a slightly different pattern from the one we are accustomed to. Nineteen years is the earliest age at which candidates are accepted, and more often they are 21 years old when they first enter the nursing school. Before she begins training each candidate is expected to have either a standard of education equal to university entrance, or to have attended a special five-month course at a folk high school.

Preliminary Training

This special course would seem in many ways to be similar to that of the British preliminary training school, but it is conducted by an education authority although there is always at least one trained sister tutor on the staff. The material covered not only deals with anatomy and physiology, and simple nursing procedures, but includes Danish literature, often English, and other cultural subjects in addition to gymnastics and cookery. The prospective student nurse is also expected to have spent at least six months working in a family other than her own helping the housewife to care for the house and the family. The British students felt that this was a first-class idea; they thought that as a result of this experience the Danish student nurse was more mature and more able to look after herself than the British student nurse who frequently went straight from the schoolroom to hospital without any further experience of everyday life.

At the present time there is no State examination for nurses in Denmark. Each hospital conducts its own examinations and issues its own certificate, but recently legislation has been enacted which will enable examinations to be conducted on a national basis.

The British nurses gained the impression that there was no shortage of candidates for Danish schools of nursing, and they also noticed that the ratio of trained staff to student nurses in each ward and department was very much higher than it is in this country. Danish students receive pocket money during their training, but the pay of the trained staff is higher than that in this country. Off duty throughout the country was arranged on the three-shift system, and conditions in the nurses homes were universally good.

During the provincial visits several of the party had the opportunity of accompanying the local district nurse and the health visitor on their rounds. They felt that the work was very similar to that in Britain, but were interested to hear that there were few infant welfare clinics, as the health visitor conducts her work mainly in the patient's homes. These visits were very enlightening for almost invariably whatever the family income the homes of the people were impeccably clean, full of growing plants and flowers, and seemed to be furnished and decorated with a high standard of taste.

One factor which made this exchange much easier was that each nurse regardless of rank wore her name clearly printed on a badge for all to see. This was reinforced by the custom which entailed shaking hands with everyone, on which they announced their name, a custom we rapidly adopted, as it made for friendliness and efficiency.

Many other interesting points from both the nurses' and the patients' angles were presented to us. The blackboard above each patient's bed bearing his name, and his diagnosis expressed in Latin, the zinc baths hanging under each child's bed in the children's ward of one hospital, the complete absence of extension treatment for Perthe's disease.

Visits of Professional Interest

The visits of professional interest were all arranged by Miss Voigt. On Friday, August 17, we were taken to the medical historical museum. Among the things which appealed most to the party was a reconstruction of a corner of a hospital ward of the middle 1800's—the bed with a straw mattress, a copper bedpan with a padded rim which was covered with leather, a warming-pan, a candle on a long stick for the use of the night nurse, an oil lamp on the locker alongside two books, one in Danish for the common folk, and one in Latin for the educated. There were diagnostic models beautifully carved in ivory used by eastern ladies for indicating to the doctor the site of their pain, chairs which had been used for restraining maniacs, a whole row of different types of bedstead including one for epileptics which was nothing less than a six-foot long padded box with a wire-netting lid, and one of Von Leeuwenhoek's original microscopes.

That same night the student nurses all met at the Danish Council for Nurses and then went by coach to the Lovens Kemiske Fabrik (the Lion Chemical Factory) on the outskirts of Copenhagen. Here they were given a most interesting talk by Mr. Rasmussen on penicillin production. He told us how during the German occupation the Danish chemists heard about penicillin in Britain, how they managed to grow some and used it for members of the Resistance movement without the Germans finding out. Following the talk there was a conducted tour of the penicillin production plant during which the guides answered innumerable questions, and the students learnt a great deal. After the tour we were entertained to supper, and it was 9.45 p.m. before we boarded the bus again to return home.

On the way to the provinces. British student nurses leave Copenhagen. Centre Miss Voigt, secretary of the Danish Students' Category Committee.

The next day was Saturday, and at 9 a.m. we again set out in our coach. First we went through delightful country to Elsinore and toured Kronberg Castle, best known to us as the scene of Shakespeare's Hamlet. The state apartments were light and airy and full of wonderful paintings. The dungeons were dark, damp and forbidding. These were guarded by an enormous statue of Holger the Dane who waits to defend Denmark if she should ever be in danger. From Elsinore we travelled through wooded country to Hornbaek. Here we took our parcels of smorrbrød into the Store Bjorns Hus where we had our lunch and were introduced to Danish pastries.

After lunch several members of the party went for a swim in the rain while the remainder explored Hornbaek which is a small but popular holiday resort. At 3 p.m. we all went to visit the Hornbaek rehabilitation centre, a remarkably fully equipped establishment which was converted from a luxury hotel following the epidemic of poliomyelitis in Copenhagen in 1952. A few of the original patients were still in residence, but now the centre is being used more and more for patients who have had fractures, or have spinal and cerebral lesions.

That evening we returned to Copenhagen for what should have been an early night, but on return to the nurses homes most of the party were invited to students rooms for coffee parties, the 'Welcom' candles were lit and the talk went on until the early morning.

Danish Council of Nurses

On Sunday we went to St. Albans Church, the English Church at Langelinie, and afterwards we were entertained to lunch at the Gronningen Restaurant by the Danish Council of Nurses. We were welcomed by Miss Kruse, the executive secretary, who said that international exchanges should be made by the young and as yet unimportant people, rather than by the old important ones who were too old to learn from each other. Miss Voigt also told us all about the Danish student nurses' association, and mentioned that in Scandinavia the units linked with each other in the different countries for exchange of views and visits. The British nurses thought that this was an idea which could usefully be extended.

By the time lunch had finished it was raining again, so we scurried along the promenade to see the Little Mermaid sitting lonely on her rock in the sea. That night we met at the Amtssygehuset, the district hospital at Gentofte, for a social evening. This was held in the nurses dining-room. The tables were arranged in a large E, decorated with Union Jacks, and Danish flags, and of course the candles were lit, and the main lights put out. The Danish nurses entertained the gathering, and not to be outdone the British replied, doing their best with Welsh and Scots songs, stories, and ending up teaching the Danes

' One man went to mow '.

During Monday afternoon we inspected the world-famous Carlsberg Breweries, and learned much to our surprise that all the profits are administered by a foundation for the benefit of science and the arts, and that most of the statues, art galleries and museums which abound in Copenhagen are provided by this means.

In the evening we went to Tivoli, a peculiarly Danish institution, a combination of the South Shore at Blackpool with the Festival Hall. All tastes are catered for—there are donkey rides for the children, fairgrounds for the frivolous, concert halls for the serious minded, illuminated fountains and fireworks, beer gardens and smart restaurants, and an open air pantomime which turned out to be a genuine harlequinade which is no longer seen in this country. Several members of the party were seen bravely going on to the big dipper, and coming off looking a little green, some patronized the dodg'em cars, others went to a concert, and we finally met on the Nimb Terrace for a light meal while we watched an acrobatic display on the terrace outside.

On Tuesday we visited a tuberculosis dispensary and hospital at Lyngby, and we were told how successful the campaign against tuberculosis had been since the introduction of the BCG vaccine, and that afternoon we visited the National Serum Institute where all the BCG vaccine used in Britain is made.

At 11.30 p.m. that night the first two student nurses to go to the provinces left by the night boat for Bornholm. Next morning at 7.55 a.m. the next two boarded the train, and by half past nine they had all gone to see more of Denmark. They stayed in Svendborg, Holbaek, Hillerod, Nykobing Falster, Ronne, Aarhus, Hjorring, Randers, Holsterbro, Kolding, Viborg and Middlefart. In these places they were met and entertained by the student nurses' unit of the hospital in which they stayed. Some members were taken on cycle tours, some visited a Viking festival, others inspected a large farm which sent its produce to Britain. All those within reach went to Odense, the home of Hans Christian Andersen. Others climbed the Sky Mountain; it is only 300 feet high but it is Denmark's nearest approach to a real mountain. Two of the students were as near as they are ever likely to be to a mink coat when they visited a mink farm. They visited ceramic factories, homes for the elderly and for arthritics, and a school for limbless children run by a man who himself has no hands.

After a very full week the student nurses all returned to Copenhagen in time for a press conference which made everyone feel very important, but surprisingly tongue-tied.

An Evening to Remember

That evening we went to a country cottage belonging to the nurses of the municipal hospital of Copenhagen. As soon as we arrived we were sent for a walk along the shore of a beautiful lake and when we returned to the cottage it was nearly dark. The windows of the cottage were full of candles burning to welcome us, and when we got inside there was a roaring log fire, hot dogs and lemonade. We all sang songs, some Danish some English, and talked and laughed until it was 10.30 and time to return and pack our bags for the last time.

The next morning found us again at Dagmarhus, sadly saying goodbye to the Danish students who had looked after us so charmingly and so well. Miss Voigt came with us to the airport at Kastrup, and it seemed no time at all before we were waving our last goodbyes from the plane. Soon we were at London Airport being met by Miss Spalding, and then no sooner had we left the bus at Waterloo than the close-knit party of 24 disintegrated as each one went her way, sorry that the holiday was over but so glad that she had been to Denmark.

the pre-nursing course students at work. They also went to the newly opened technical college, of which the town is proud.

As the visit of the Danish students coincided with the local dairy festival week, the students that evening joined in the folk dancing at the Town Hall.

Tuesday morning was spent in visiting Outwoods Hospital which is the sanatorium of the group and also part of the Andressey Hospital which cares for the chronic sick patients in the group. On both these interesting visits the students were welcomed and accompanied by the respective matrons.

Tuesday afternoon the students visited one of the large breweries of the town—brewing is the chief industry. They were accompanied by a former sister of the hospital who is now in charge of the medical centre at the brewery, where the guests were entertained to tea. A film show was given in the evening in the lecture room, taking the audience through the lovely highlands of Scotland, and through western and central England.

At noon, the party left for a visit to Stratford-on-Avon, where they spent a very happy afternoon. Before returning to Burton-on-Trent by coach in the early hours of Thursday morning, the party saw Hamlet at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre.

On Thursday morning the party visited St. Matthew's Hospital, Burntwood—which is the psychiatric unit of the Group—and were met by the medical superintendent and matron.

They returned to Lichfield for lunch, and visited the cathedral and other places of interest in the afternoon, returning to the hospital for tea, after which further opportunity was given for our guests to be with matron to discuss our English nurse training methods, and then at 8.30 p.m., the hospital chaplain conducted the regular Evensong in his church opposite the hospital.

On Friday morning matron accompanied the guests to the other wards and departments of the hospital and opportunity was afforded them to complete their acquaintance with the teaching staff and the students in the preliminary training school

A very happy afternoon was spent at the Derbyshire Children's Hospital, Derby, by kind invitation of matron, who accompanied the guests on their interesting visit. In the evening 36 student nurses and others went by coach to the Leicestershire area of beautiful valleys and vales, where everyone very much appreciated the scenery, especially as a picnic supper was possible, the weather having a spell of true June warmth and light.

This ended a very happy week, and the guests after a very early breakfast were seen off by Miss D. Roberts, Miss D. Puryer and Miss J. Baldwin.

MILE END HOSPITAL STUDENT NURSES VISIT PARIS

WHILE in Paris we visited the Hospital Lavennec. We were taken by Mme Kinche who interpreted for us. Two other nurses, one Australian and one Canadian who were visiting hospitals as part of a tuberculosis course, were also shown over the hospital with us, so we only saw the tuberculosis section.

The hospital was very similar to an English hospital except that the large wards were divided by wood and glass partitions into cubicles, each housing one or two patients. This, we thought, was a very good idea, as more privacy was afforded to each patient while the necessity for screens was reduced. Each ward had patients in different stages of tuberculosis, ranging from seriously ill to convalescent; patients who needed particular nursing care were put into single wards away from the main ward. Every patient had an oxygen inlet apparatus fitted above the bed coming from pipes within the wall.

We noticed that very few staff appeared to be present in the wards, much fewer than in an English hospital.

Major chest surgery is performed in the hospital and the operating theatres were quite modern although the hospital itself is very old. Instruments were sterilized and placed in sterile containers in special cupboards for any emergency operations which might arise, and the operating theatres were of a good size and very bright.

The nurses' home was extremely good. Children of the married nurses had a nursery set apart from the hospital with a small garden in which they could play.

BELGIAN STUDENT NURSES VISIT LONDON HOSPITALS

AFTER tea at the Royal College of Nursing on Friday afternoon, July 20, the party of Belgian nurses staying at the Royal Free Hospital, went to Richmond by river for the rest of the day. Saturday morning was spent shopping in town. On Sunday morning they went to St. Paul's Cathedral, and in the afternoon their friends staying at Guy's Hospital visited them.

On Monday they did more shopping and then went sightseeing on the Embankment. In the evening they went to the Festival Hall. They were seen off at Victoria Station on Tuesday morning.

The party staying at Guy's Hospital spent Friday evening at a Promenade Concert. The next day they were taken to Westminster Abbey, the Houses of Parliament and the Royal Festival Hall.

The same evening they went round the Tower of London and then attended the interesting ceremony of the Keys, and during the following two days saw the Changing of the Guard on Horse Guards Parade, then went to a service at St. Paul's Cathedral and went shopping.

Two Weeks in Oldham

AFTER completing their training at the University School of Nursing, St. Pierre Hospital, Brussels, four nurses spent a 14-day visit in Oldham, staying in the nurses home at Oldham and District General Hospital, visiting hospitals of all types in the Oldham and Manchester area, accompanying health visitors.

On Monday morning they were received by the Mayor, Alderman T. Lyson, in the Mayor's Parlour at the Town Hall. With Miss Ann Miskella, an Irish nurse at Oldham and District General Hospital, acting as guide and interpreter, they were shown mayoral chains and presented with town badges and souvenir booklets giving the history of the town.

Before returning to Belgium and further studies in maternity and social welfare work, the nurses are to visit a hospital in London. (Fuller report later).

[By courtesy Sunderland Echo]

Miss Vibeke Thogerson and Miss Kathrine Brinch Neilson, from DENMARK, visited Sunderland under the exchange scheme. They visited the Royal Infirmary, the Children's Hospital and the Orthopaedic and Accident Hospital, also a coal mine. They are seen here (on left) with student nurses from Sunderland Royal Infirmary when they visited the offices of 'The Sunderland Echo'.

SPEECHMAKING CONTESTS

SCOTLAND

"NO knowledge is too great to bring to the nursing profession. There is no vision that can envisage its possibilities", said Miss L. M. Avery, secretary-general of the Royal Australian Nursing Federation, when she presented the Greig Cup and prizes at the annual rally and Speechmaking Contest held at the Royal Edinburgh Mental Hospital on September 19.

During the morning, student nurses from all over Scotland were taken round the hospital on visits of interest, and in the afternoon approximately 90 student nurses and guests were present to hear seven contestants deliver five-minute speeches on 'Education for Life through Nursing'. The adjudicators were Miss R. H. Pecker, O.B.E., former registrar of the General Nursing Council for Scotland; Miss S. R. Aitken, theatre manager of the Gateway Theatre, Edinburgh, and Mr. A. Fordyce, lecturer in Education Methods at Moray House Training College for Teachers, Edinburgh; they gave constructive and kindly criticism to the speechmakers.

The Winner

The Greig cup was awarded to Miss Annie Butchart of King's Cross Hospital, Dundee, and Miss Margaret Butler, Stracathro Hospital, Brechin, Angus, was runner-up. Miss Butchart concluded a thoughtful speech by saying: "The nurse who is to become a whole person must not allow her world to be bounded by hospital walls. She must take the lessons she has learned through her own work and get outside, have interests common to her age group and companionship of men and women in other walks of life. Knowledge gained in hospital must not dominate her thinking."

Professor A. Kennedy, professor of psychiatry in the University of Edinburgh, acted as chairman and addressed the audience during the adjudicators' absence.

Votes of thanks to all who had contributed to a successful and enjoyable day and for the most generous hospitality extended by the hospital were expressed by Miss Mitchell, a student nurse from the Western General Hospital, Edinburgh, and by Miss I. Spalding, secretary of the Student Nurses' Association.

EASTERN AREA

THE Eastern Area Speechmaking Contest was held on Thursday, September 13, on one of the few summer afternoons this year, at the Bedford General Hospital (South Wing). (Picture last week.)

Most of the competitors arrived the night before and the next morning visited the Meltis Chocolate Factory. After lunch at the hospital there was time to stroll round the grounds, enjoying the sun and lovely flowers.

For the contest, held in a large sitting-room, there was an audience of nearly 60 people which included members of the hospital management committee, the chairman and secretary of the Bedford Branch of the Royal College of Nursing, and staff of the North and South Wings of the hospital. We were specially pleased to welcome the new preliminary training school and pre-nursing students and hoped they enjoyed this insight into student activities.

There were 12 competitors but unfortunately Miss Shirley Brown, of Southlands Hospital, Shoreham-by-Sea, and Miss Mary Church, of Epsom District Hospital, Epsom, were ill and unable to compete.

The subject was Leisure is an art which we have forgotten how to practice.

Most of the competitors agreed that leisure is a forgotten art as so much of our free time is arranged for us. Several defined the word 'leisure' and said what is work to one is leisure to another.

The winner was Miss Diana Langdown, Royal Portsmouth and Queen Alexandra Hospitals, Portsmouth. This is Miss Langdown's second win and we congratulate her on a well thought-out and witty speech. Miss Langdown has acquired the art of a good delivery and the ability to interest her audience.

The runner-up was Miss Peggy Walker, Chase Farm Hospital, Enfield. This was Miss Walker's first attempt and she is to be congratulated on an interesting talk. She took the audience from leisure activities in the Stone Age to this modern age and threatened the audience with a ballet by robots.

An Area Meeting

While the judges were conferring, Miss M. C. Thyer, the eastern area organizer, reminded the Student Nurses' Association members that this was an area meeting and they should take advantage of it and meet members of other Units.

The Mayor of Bedford, Alderman R. G. Gale, J.P., congratulated the competitors for being so brave in taking part in the contest and then presented the trophy.

The three judges were Mrs. F. Chalker, lecturer in English, North Bedfordshire College of Further Education; Miss H. Lawson-Brown, headmistress, The Dame Alice Harper School, Bedford; Miss M. G. Watkins, headmistress, Bedford High School for Girls. Each judge gave most helpful comments on the speeches and told the competitors that if they could control their nerves, they would be able to interest their audience in the subject of their speech.

Votes of thanks were then proposed and the afternoon ended with tea, during which several of the competitors were able to get individual criticisms from the judges.

Student Nurses' Association members were able to meet Miss Harris, one of the Eastern Area Central Representative Council members. There were sorry to hear that, owing to illness, Miss J. Flory, the other Eastern Area Council member, was unable to be present.

STUDENT NURSES' ASSOCIATION UNIT REPORTS

Scotland and Northern Ireland

Belfast Fever Hospital

OUR UNIT IS QUITE SMALL, having only about 60 members, but for all that we are becoming a really active and strong organization. We hold at least one meeting every month, at which we collect 1d. from each member and so, slowly but surely, we are building up our funds. Business is discussed first of all and then we have some entertainment—either games or some wee show, put on by the nurses themselves. Our president, matron, shows keen enthusiasm in all these games.

Each month we hold a party, and we have started a hockey team—however, funds do not allow us to obtain our own pitch, and in the meantime we are content to practice on a soccer pitch. We are now making plans to have a netball team and a table-tennis team.

Our new recreation hall is in the process of being built; when it is completed, we have plans to hold a great historical garden party.

Our library is going quite well under the supervision of some of the junior nurses. This year we had great competition at our hospital for the forthcoming Speechmaking Contest for the Cates Shield. Our representative is Miss Fraser and we have great confidence in her.

On August 22 we held an exciting fancy dress party. Out of our funds we hope to buy some gramophone records to give enjoyment to many people.

Some day we hope to be one of the best Units in all the Association.

DORCAS RESTRICK.

Greenisland Orthopaedic Hospital, Co. Antrim

THE PAST YEAR in this Unit has been a pleasing and successful one. The student nurses have shown great interest in the association and we have almost 100 per cent. membership.

Educational and social functions are held on alternate months. We have had a talk on amateur photography, one on industrial nursing and another on a visit to the U.S.S.R by Dr. B. R. Clarke, M.C., M.D., medical director of the Northern Ireland Tuberculosis Authority, with lantern slides. The recent Unit speechmaking contest was a social evening with entertainment by the nurses. A number of outside guests are usually invited to these functions.

The winner in our last year's speechmaking contest, Miss M. McMullan, gained second place for the Belfast Telegraph Cup and competed for the Cates Trophy. Two members attended the Annual General Meeting and gave reports to a Unit general meeting.

In May we held a treasure hunt. A few informal dances held during the winter gave good financial gain as well as enjoyment.

In June a garden fete and bazaar raised nearly £80, of which £50 will be donated to the Northern Ireland Council for Orthopaedic Development (Spastics) and £10 to the Royal College of Nursing scholarships fund. We feel that this effort was most rewarding and the help in this and our other activities given by Miss D. Melville, M.B.E., matron, who is president of the Belfast Branch of the Royal College of Nursing and also of the Unit, has been invaluable.

To maintain in good repair the television set bought by the Unit last year we have a T.V. fund, into which is placed one quarter of the proceeds from most functions. We have facilities for tennis, table-tennis, croquet and putting and recently bought a dart board.

An interesting future programme, including a dramatic society, is being planned, and we expect to have full membership very shortly. Each of us will endeavour to support the aims and objects of the Association.

IRENE NEVIN.

Greenock Royal Infirmary and Larkfield Hospital

THE STUDENT NURSES started off their winter programme by having a sale of work, which brought in the sum of £89. The money was raised to help to buy a television set for the nurses homes in both hospitals, and part of it is to go to the World Health Organization.

For the future, our plans are mainly centred on a concert which we intend having in January, preparations for which have already started. We are hoping to be able to give the patients the benefit of our efforts.

For the nurses' leisure we are planning trips to pantomimes. On the whole this Unit is quite active.

CENTRAL REPRESENTATIVE COUNCIL

MISS ROSEMARY A. LUCAS
Hospital for Sick Children,
Great Ormond Street, London, has been appointed chairman, and

MISS AGNES H. B. JARVIS
Stracathro Hospital, Brechin,
has been appointed vice-chairman.

Raigmore Hospital, Inverness

OUR UNIT HAS BEEN more active and has aroused more interest than in the past year or two. Membership has increased from 13 on September 1, 1955, to 23 on September 1, 1956.

In November our chairman represented us at the Winter Reunion in London. She attended the finals of the Speechmaking Contest and joined in visits to places of historic interest. Our treasurer was our representative at the Association's Summer Conference in May. She greatly enjoyed her contact with student nurses from Northern Ireland, and also the highlight of the conference, Miss Norton's talk on 'Geriatric Nursing'. Of both winter and summer meetings the Unit received vivid reports.

Two enjoyable dances were held in the course of the year, the second being a country dance. Preparations are now being made for a third, when our new recreation room is formally opened.

We are raising funds by various means. Early in July our vice-president presented each member with a shilling to trade, and within six weeks 23s. had become £10 8s. 6d. A prize was awarded for the best effort.

One of the radiographers has asked the Unit for volunteers to form a concert party and is producing a concert to entertain patients and friends at Christmas.

In aid of the Benevolent Fund for nurses in Scotland, a free gift scheme was set on foot this summer and raised over £17.

At the invitation of the local Branch of the Royal College of Nursing, Unit members attended the Florence Nightingale Commemoration Service in the Old High Church on May 13.

E. C. CRAIG.

Royal Hospital for Sick Children, Edinburgh

THIS HAS BEEN an eventful and successful year. Our membership has increased and with the present enthusiasm we look forward to 1957.

The highlight of our winter programme was a carol service and Festival of the Nine Lessons. The service was opened by our hospital chaplain and the lessons were read by members of the hospital staff. The choir, composed of student nurses, sang carols and several solos were rendered.

In the winter months we held a beetle drive and had a talk on dramatic art. Following a business meeting a film show was held. In the spring we had a visit from Miss Walsh. Our principal sister tutor gave a stimulating account of her paediatric study tour in Holland.

The swimming club finished off the season with a gala, the third-year student nurses carrying off the honours. Miss A. E. Fergusson was the champion and was presented with a small silver cup at the garden fete, which was held in July in the grounds of our home for babies and toddlers. Mr. Duncan Macrae, the well-known Scottish actor, opened the fete. The weather was fair and sunny and soon most of the goods were sold from the seven stalls. The grand total of £40 was collected and part of the proceeds is being given to the Nurses Benevolent Fund for Scotland. After the fete an informal dance was held and was enjoyed by everyone.

Two of our members attended the Student Nurses' Association Annual General Meeting in London, reporting back to our Unit.

RENATE ROSE.

Stracathro Hospital, Brechin

AFTER OUR ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING it was decided that meetings must be held frequently, in order to retain the interest of the members, and that all meetings should end with tea to enable the members to get to know each other.

The first business meeting of the year was held in order to arrange a welcome party for the new P.T.S. We decided to have a bus trip to Loch Lee, which is at the top of one of the nearby glens. On the evening of the run the weather could not have been more favourable. The run up the winding road through the hills and avenues of trees and rhododendrons was enjoyed by all, and on arrival there we had various races and prize games and finally ended with a picnic supper and a hill climb.

At our next meeting one of our sister tutors gave a talk on a 'Three-capital Tour of the Continent'. This brought up the topic for the next meeting—why could not the Association have a trip to the Continent next year for those interested? Twelve members were interested; as it was too early to book for the holiday another meeting will be held at a later date.

Miss A. H. B. Jarvis, who is a member of our staff and also our representative for Scotland on the Central Representative Council, accepted an invitation to speak to our Unit. She gave an excellent talk on 'Associationship' and also gave an account on the Annual General Meeting in London and of some of the other Units' activities.

Professor David E. Mann, professor of Pharmacology and director of Cancer Research at the university in Philadelphia, U.S.A., gave a talk on 'Cancer Research' to our Unit. This meeting was open to all grades of staff and proved to be very successful.

To date it seemed that in spite of all our activities, the Unit funds were comparatively low. What could be done to raise them?

We discussed members' suggestions and on pay day a box was passed round and a favourable sum was collected. Then 1s. extra per person was charged for a trip to Aberdeen to the David Whitfield show, which was enjoyed by everyone. This also showed a good profit. We also held a dance and a competition which brought a large profit, so it was decided at the next meeting to present a chair to the hospital chapel.

It is hoped that we will be able to hold a Student Nurses' Association service in the hospital chapel when the presentation of the chair will be made. If it is successful, it is hoped that the service will be held annually.

RUTH G. ELDER.

Stonehouse County Hospital

THE STONEHOUSE UNIT has not been very active this last year, but we have had an interesting talk and demonstration on 'Good Grooming' by a representative of Boots the Chemists. We also had a demonstration of hair styling by a professional hair stylist.

Early this year one of the local doctors showed a number of travel films, including the pilgrimage to Lourdes. We hope to have another film show of a similar type at a later date.

We had a Hallowe'en party, two beetle drives and a whist drive. We also had two evening bus runs, one to the Forth Bridge and one to the Military Tattoo at Edinburgh Castle.

We are hoping to arrange some talks for the coming months, also a whist drive, beetle drive, dance and sale of work.

Our present membership is 19, but we are hoping to enrol more members in the near future.

M. MASON.

Tyrone County Hospital

THE PAST YEAR has been a busy one for the Unit. Our full membership has been maintained.

Being far removed from the attractions of city life in this quiet country town, the Unit tries to provide as much social entertainment as possible for its members, and seems to have succeeded fairly well.

In January, two of our members attended the Belfast Branch annual meeting, and they gave a very interesting report at our monthly meeting. At our February meeting, Miss Frazer, county midwifery supervisor, gave us a very interesting talk on 'Health Visiting'.

Our annual general meeting was held in March, at which our new committee members were elected. Miss M. E. Grey, secretary, to the Royal College of Nursing, Northern Ireland, and Miss Russell, area organizer, were our guests for the evening. A talk on 'Different Aspects of Nursing Technique' was given by Miss Grey.

A professional discussion on 'Tuberculosis' took place at our April meeting, under the guidance of our county tuberculosis officer. Also in April, a dance was held in the local ballroom.

Miss Russell attended our May meeting, and spoke to our Unit on 'Health in Industry and Occupational Health Nurses'.

In June, in order to raise funds, another dance was held in the local ballroom, and was a success.

At the July meeting, congratulations and every good wish were passed to Miss B. Hudson on obtaining an invitation to the garden party at Buckingham Palace. Miss Hudson is chairman of the Central Representative Council of the Association.

In August a holiday film show was given by one of our consultants, showing his travels in India, Africa and various other foreign countries.

A member of our Unit has been selected to enter for the Speechmaking Contest in Belfast. Also in September we hope to hold another dance. A fancy dress dance has been arranged for Hallowe'en night.

Our annual prizegiving day will be in November, followed by a social evening and dance.

A. C. DIXON.

Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital, Omagh

OUR UNIT WAS FORMED three years ago, During that time we have progressed favourably. When we first started we were completely without funds, but soon raised £2 11s. We gained confidence in ourselves and held a few informal dances and our funds rose to a considerable height.

In the near future we hope to buy a television set for the student nurses, and a statuette of Florence Nightingale.

We have given £10 to the patients' comforts fund.

We have an annual outing for our members. Our future plans include having a social evening once a month.

By next year we hope to have a much larger Unit.

MARY B. COLGAN.

Western Infirmary, Glasgow

WE HAVE FOUND THAT after the membership had fallen in recent years, our numbers are increasing once more. On account of this gradual increase our activities, though few, are gaining continual support.

To date we have had two interesting demonstrations on cosmetics, a social evening in the nurses sitting-room, and were to send a representative to the Speechmaking Contest in Edinburgh this month.

In the future we hope to arrange various excursions to places of interest to the nurses and also to meet members of other Units for debates and discussions.

Presentation to Miss Bovill

CARDIFF BRANCH

PAST and present members of the Cardiff Branch, representing every branch of the nursing profession, met at the Angel Hotel, Cardiff, on September 22, for a presentation dinner to their vice-chairman, Miss S. C. Bovill. Miss Bovill, due to her retirement as matron of Cardiff Royal Infirmary, was leaving to live in London and it was with mingled feelings of pride and regret that members of the Branch gathered to pay tribute to a distinguished nurse.

The chairman, Miss M. E. Davies, presented Miss Bovill on her arrival with a bouquet, and together they received the guests, among whom were Mrs. A. A. Woodman, M.B.E., chairman of Council of the Royal College of Nursing, Mrs. C. G. Thompson, M.B.E., J.P., a past chairman of Cardiff Branch, and Miss E. P. Chubb, a past treasurer of the Branch. They, in turn, paid tribute to Miss Bovill's leadership, wise guidance, and help and inspiration during her 17 years' association with the Cardiff Branch. Mrs. Woodman recalled the inspired contribution Miss Bovill had made to the nursing profession at national level and her untiring efforts as president of the Royal College of Nursing for two years.

The chairman, on behalf of past and present Branch members, presented Miss Bovill with an illustrated parchment scroll recording her services to the Cardiff Branch, together with an inscribed silver napkin ring and two electric fires. Miss Bovill in response thanked all those who had contributed to such delightful gifts and said how much she had enjoyed her membership of the Cardiff Branch. She felt that she would miss the warmth of the friendship of the Branch, but was happy in the knowledge that the Branch was in a vigorous and flourishing state and that it was fortunate in possessing a chairman of such calibre as Miss M. E. Davies.

MOTHERS' ASK NURSE ABOUT STEEDMAN'S

"As I go round my district I am often asked for copies of 'that little red book'". So writes a Nurse in a delightful letter praising Steedman's "Hints to Mothers" booklet which is such a worthy companion to our famous product, Steedman's Powders.

Each year these useful booklets are in greater demand from enthusiastic Nurses who like to distribute them to their patients, chiefly because they so completely live up to their title and give advice and guidance about the symptoms and treatment of every childish ailment.

Of course you will be familiar with Steedman's Powders themselves, which are made to a modern prescription which contains no calomel, and are so efficacious in promoting regularity in little systems from teething time to fourteen years of age.

"Hints to Mothers," affectionately called The Little Red Book because of its durable red cover, is a very acceptable gift from nurse to her 'mothers'. You will find it very useful and we shall be happy to send a supply free and post free on request.

INVALID DIET

Benger's Food — predigested for 5 minutes.

Benger's Food — predigested for 15 minutes.

MILK IS A readily available source of protein. Frequently, however the patient is intolerant of the normal formation of curds in the stomach. Intake is reduced, digestion impaired and absorption of protein diminished.

A CLEAR CASE FOR BENGER'S FOOD. Benger's is a wheaten flour preparation containing the natural digestive enzymes amylase and trypsin. These "pre-digest" two vital foods—milk and wheaten-flour. When hot milk is added to Benger's they start to work—converting Benger's wheaten base into nourishing food and modifying the milk so that it does not form tough indigestible curds in the stomach. Extra protein is thus absorbed by the patient without strain on the digestion. Moreover, the degree of "pre-digestion" can be regulated to suit the patient's condition—"nursing" him or her back to the point where normal diet can be ingested.

THE MICROPHOTOGRAPHS ABOVE, illustrating the effects of gastric juice on both milk and Benger's Food, show how Benger's prevents the formation of curds.

FULLY-DESCRIPTIVE LITERATURE, including a specially-prepared Invalid Diet Recipe Book, is available; and a Technical Information Service is always at your disposal.
